

Ice Breakers

Things to remember about Ice Breakers

1. Kids can be nervous, be the example and participate! If you are having fun, so will the campers
2. Understand the kids, look at their responses to the games, if they are bored, change the game
3. Actively watch that no child is being left out, talk to them and urge them to participate
4. These are just ideas, feel free to use whichever ice breakers you would like

Name “Squirt Bang”

1. Have your campers stand in a circle, shoulder to shoulder while you are in the center
2. Have all the children go around and share their names
3. When you call out the name of a child, they must duck, and the campers at their left and right turn to face each other and yell out the others name
4. Whoever says the name first wins and the other must back out of the circle until there are two left.
5. Be sure to play practice rounds so that all campers have a chance to participate and learn names

Where the Kahuna Wind Blows

1. Have your campers stand in a circle, shoulder to shoulder while you are in the center
2. Whoever is in the center starts by saying “My name is ____ and The Kahuna wind blows for everyone who....”.
At this point, the person in the center can say anything from “..who is wearing blue to who speaks another language” it just has to be something that relates to them
3. Everyone in the circle who also relates to what they said must run and find a new place in the circle. (CANNOT BE DIRECTLY NEXT TO THEM)
4. The last one is now the center of the circle. Try to make sure that everyone has a turn in the middle
